Formation of a Restoration Advisory Board (RAB)

- Why RAB?
- Scope and Responsibilities
- Membership Eligibility
- RAB Alternatives

What is a Restoration Advisory Board?

- A stakeholder group which meets on a regular basis to discuss environmental restoration, where the Department of Defense oversees the restoration process
- RAB activities may include-
 - Reviewing/commenting on environmental restoration documents/activities
 - Providing and receiving input to/from the community
 - Obtaining information on schedule/type and status of environmental restoration activities

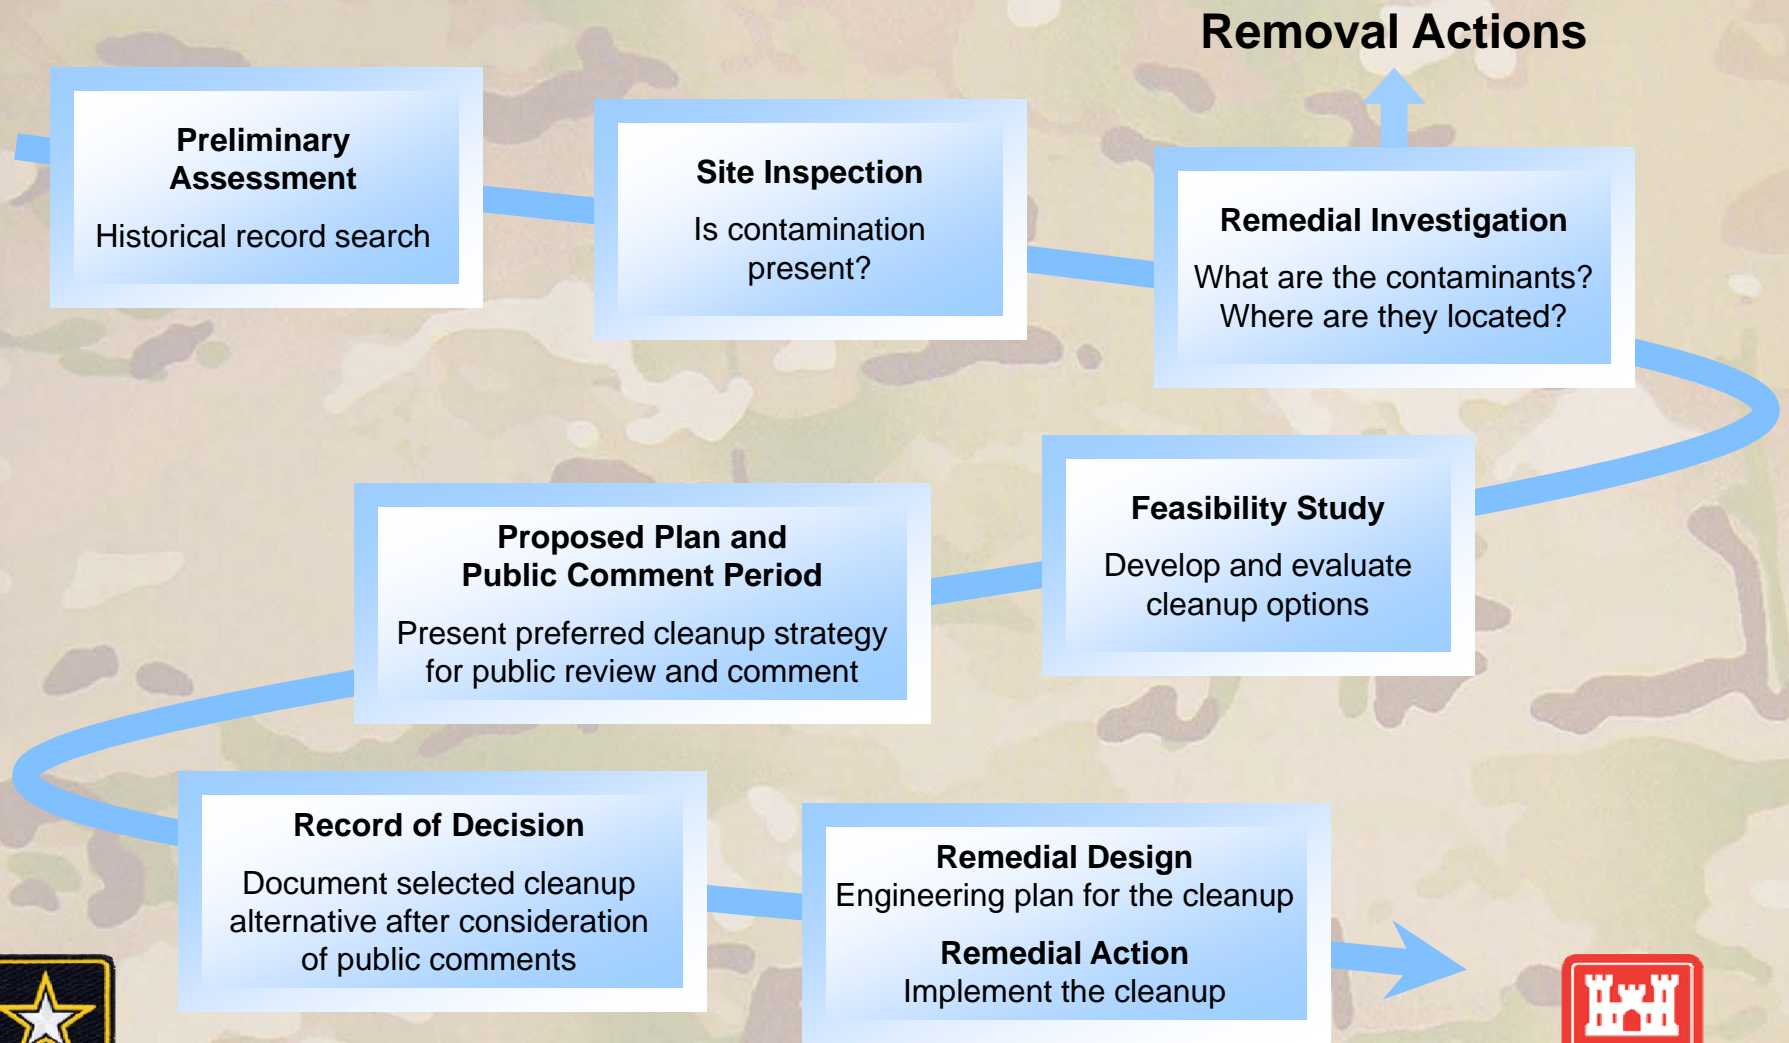

Restoration Advisory Board

- Focus is on addressing environmental restoration activities
- Army Co-Chair will identify the point of contact for handling other issues of interest to the appropriate office for resolution
- All RAB meetings are open to the public
- RAB membership is voluntary; community interest forms are available
- Community members will select a Community Co-Chair
